A major loan-shark syndicate with 5 000 debtors in its books was busted in an islandwide raid yesterday.

Nineteen people were arrested, among them a woman, making this the largest (21) catch in an operation this year. Among those nabbed in the eight-hour-long operation (22) were the syndicate's 31-year-old leader and his four accomplices. The rest were the runners, who meet debtors to hand over the loans, to give them the account numbers into which money is to be transferred or to harass them into coughing up the loans. (23)

More than $35 000 was seized, along with computers, cellphones, data storage (24) devices and ATM cards.

Investigations are ongoing, but police believe the syndicate to be behind at least (25) 500 harassment cases related to loan-sharking.

Section F: Comprehension MCQ (5 marks)

Read the passage and answer questions 26 to 30.

Sean was carried away with his new book entitled "Snakes". He had borrowed a similar book from the library three weeks ago and in wanting to have one for himself, had ransacked many bookstores before finally making his precious purchase.

A very restless child, it was surprising that Sean was so engrossed in his reading. He had even ignored a strange noise. It was only after some time, heavy-eyed, that he looked up and noticed a rod-like object on the floor. Almost instantaneously, the rod transformed and showed its fearsome face – a face belonging to a spectacled cobra. Sean's reaction was to recall two facts; the cobra was venomous and it takes about 20 000 lives a year in India, a third world nation. Looking at his bare feet, he remembered why.

At this stage, Sean was stiff with fright. He could not utter a sound. His mind flashed pictures of dead victims from snake bites. Looking at the cobra, he saw a similar plight but he knew that it was in a defence position.

Sean's mother felt something was amiss. It was highly unusual that her hyperactive son could be so silent for such a long period of time. She entered his room and followed his gaze. Her heart skipped a beat. She was choked for words and all she could let out was a gasp of pure terror.

For each of the questions from 26 to 30, four options are given. One of them is the correct answer. Make a choice (1, 2, 3 or 4). Shade the correct oval (1, 2, 3 or 4) on the Optical Answer Sheet.

26. Sean had obtained the book "Snakes" _____.

- (1) from the library
- (2) from his mother

28. At first, Sean thought the object was a _____.
- (1) rod
  - (2) cobra
  - (3) fearsome face
  - (4) photograph of a snake
29. Many Indians died from cobra bites because they _____.
- (1) did not put on footwear
  - (2) could not outrun the cobras
  - (3) did not know how to defend themselves
  - (4) used their bare hands to catch the cobras
30. Sean's mother was unable to say a word because she _____.

An allergy is a disorder in which the body over-reacts to harmless substances that in normal circumstances should not produce any reaction at all. An allergy can occur in almost (31) _____ part of your body and can be caused by just about anything. (32) _____, allergies become evident on parts of the body directly exposed to the outside world.

Certain allergies occur only at certain times of the year, while some (33) _____ there all the time. Those (34) _____ occur all the year round are probably caused by something you come into contact with every day (35) _____ your life. It could be some seemingly harmless object such as your deodorant (36) _____ the pillow you lie on each night.

Allergies can occur at any time (37) _____ your life but it usually happens before your fortieth birthday. Sometimes the symptoms are (38) _____ slight you do not even know you have an allergy and it may take years for an allergy to become noticeable. It all depends (39) _____ the amount of the substance to which you are exposed and for how long. Sometimes an allergy can disappear as suddenly (40) _____ it arrived, without any treatment. Sometimes it comes and goes for no apparent reason and with <sup>no</sup> regularity.

It used to be thought that people could not swallow well in space, so the food programmes for astronauts consisted of bite-sized pieces of food pushed out of tubes.

(41)

However, it is now know that you can eat in space in the same way as on Earth.

(42)

The physical constrains lie in the body of the astronaut. Limited storage and cooking

(43)

fersileetees with no space or power to spare for complex food preparation, mean that (44)

the challenge for space nutritionists have gone beyond providing astronauts with food that is perlataber and good for them. The solution has emerged in the form of (46)

(45)

dehidreyted foods.

With space flights often lasting more than a week, astronauts cannot live on granules alone. They also take pre-cooked meals seal in bags which they warm up in a small oven. These are tasty than granules but according to Dr Helen Lane, a research nutritionist, it is difficult to get astronauts to eat as much as they need. It is because they are so busy there is no steemulasion to eat. As a result, tickling their taste buds is an uphill struggle, especially since one of the effects of zero gravity was to reduce the sense of smell. The choice of food can be limited as weightlessness is an important consideration in space food because of the danger that the food might fragment and float off in different directions.

(47)

(48)

(50)

Section K: Comprehension Open-Ended (20 marks)

Read the passage below and answer questions 71 to 80.

I was doing a big clean-up in the morning and my son was helping. As he rummaged through the boxes and bags, he came across a knotted handkerchief with an old, dark brown coin nestled inside. "Mum, can I have this? Can I play with this in my cash register?" he asked. I took one look and was immediately transported to another time. "You can play with all your coins, but not this one," I said slowly. "This one's special. I will never again see the woman who gave this to me." As I fingered the coin gently, a wave of nostalgia swept over me. "This coin is worth much more than its monetary value." My son looked at me strangely and I explained.

In 1991, I had spent five months in a bleak African country, Niger. There were many things I found difficult about that place – the climate and beggars were my biggest most constant gripes. Street urchins would continually thrust their hands into my face, shouting, "Cadeau! Cadeau!" (gift in French, the former colonial tongue)

After I had finished my nursing stint there, a friend and I headed for neighbouring Burkina Faso to work in a health clinic with much enthusiasm. "It's much greener in Burkina. Even the Coke tastes better," the locals assured us.

Arriving by taxi in our destination in Burkina, we began to unload. With my daypack wedged between my legs, I reached for my larger piece of luggage. Out of the darkness, a motorcycle with two men approached slowly. Without warning, one of the men grabbed my daypack as the motorcycle swept close by and disappeared into the night. The bag had my passport, money, traveller's cheques, camera and other paraphernalia precious to me. I was in deep trouble and the nearest Australian consulate was in Ethiopia. How was I ever going to get a new passport anytime soon?

In the weeks that followed, I guarded the rest of my valuables and regarded the locals with suspicion. I endured interrogations by the authorities with thinly-veiled frustrations. All I wanted to do was to leave that terrible place.

Then, walking through the Burkina's streets one day, an old woman approached me and thrust her hand in my face. "Cadeau! Cadeau!" she cried. I had enough. I told her firmly in French, "I have no 'cadeau'. I have no money. A thief stole all my money two weeks ago and now I can't get out of your country. I cannot give you anything." The beggar woman listened attentively and pondered my words. Then her face crumpled into a toothless grin as she reached into the folds of her dress. "Then I will give you a cadeau," she announced. Kindly, she placed an old, dark brown coin in my palm. I looked at it in shock. It was a minuscule amount of money, but for this woman, the coin represented a meal. At that moment, I felt the shame of affluence and the humility of charity. She had given me a gift disproportionate to anything that I had ever donated.

In the midst of her poverty, she was able to give me something priceless. I saw then, the unexpected beauty of the people of Burkina Faso and appreciated profoundly the quiet dignity of the poor.
