Comprehension (MCQ) (10 marks)

Read the following information report and answer the questions that follow.

Polar bears are the world's largest land predators. Wild polar bears can be found in Alaska, Canada, Russia, Denmark, Norway and the Arctic. Each of these places either banned hunting or established rules on the number of polar bears that can be hunted within their own boundaries. These rules help keep polar bear populations stable. Today, 25,000 to 40,000 polar bears roam the Arctic.

Around the age of four or five, female polar bears can start having babies. They usually only have two cubs and they have these babies in a cave they have dug in a large snow drift. They stay in the cave over winter and come out in spring with the babies. The cubs are much smaller than human babies when they are born. They are the size of a rat and weigh a little more than 400 grams. They can grow to the size of a full-grown man within a year if they are supplied with plenty of food.

Despite what we think, the fur of a polar bear is not white. Each hair is a clear hollow tube. Polar bears look white because each hollow hair reflects light. On sunny days, it traps the sun's heat and keeps the bear warm at 36 degrees Celsius when they are resting. The fur of a polar bear is also oily and waterproof. The hairs do not mat, allowing the polar bears to easily shake free of water and any ice that may form after swimming.

Many people believe that the polar bear is at risk of becoming extinct because of global warming. When the ice disappears, there is no place for polar bears to rest after they are done swimming and searching for food. Research has shown that by the year 2050, the population of polar bears will decrease by two-thirds.

Comprehension (Open-ended) (10 marks)

Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions that follow.

One night, Rabbit sat near a lake to enjoy some fresh air. It was a beautiful night and the full moon lit up the cloudless sky. Rabbit gazed at the moon's round reflection in the lake and thought how beautiful it looked. Little did he realise that Fox was hiding behind a boulder, observing his every move. Fox licked his lips and pounced on Rabbit.

Rabbit was shocked! He quickly leapt over some rocks and ran around some bushes to escape, but he finally came to a wall of rock. He knew he had nowhere else to run. He thought hard and came up with a plan.

"Caught you! I have not eaten for days and I am famished!" Fox said, flashing his pointy, white teeth.

"But I am such a small rabbit. You don't want to eat me. I have a better idea. Just before you came by, I saw a huge wheel of cheese resting on the bottom of the lake. That will surely keep you full for days," Rabbit replied, his eyes twinkling.

Fox's mouth watered as he thought of devouring the huge wheel of cheese. "Show it to me!" he said.

Rabbit took Fox closer to the lake and pointed at something round and yellow in the water. Fox was delighted to see it. Without thinking, he held his breath and dived in. He swam all the way down to the bottom of the lake, but he could not find the cheese. He quickly swam back up. To his surprise, Rabbit was nowhere to be found.

Fox lifted his head up to howl in frustration when he suddenly saw the full moon. He looked again at the lake and saw the moon's round reflection. At that moment, he was furious as he knew he had been tricked. He stomped his feet and went home, hungry.

As for Rabbit, he was safe in his cosy burrow.
