Part 4 : Comprehension MCQ (5 marks)

Read the passage below carefully and answer the question 26 to 30.

Once upon a time, there was a rich man who liked to collect carvings of animals. He had many sculptures of animals but he had no carved mouse so he called for two skilled sculptors.

"I want each of you to carve a mouse for me. I want them to be so life-like that my cat will think they are real mice and pounce on them. The first mouse that my cat pounces on will win for the sculptor this bag of gold."

Both sculptors quickly went home and set to work. After some time, they returned to the rich man. One had carved a beautiful mouse out of wood. It was so well done that it looked exactly like a mouse. The other man, however, had done very badly. He had used a material that flaked and looked strange. It did not look like a mouse at all.

The rich man was surprised. He liked the wooden mouse very much but was not quite sure what the other piece was.

"Please bring in your cat and let it decide which one is the better mouse," the second man requested.

Although the rich man thought it was rather silly, he ordered his cat to be brought in. The moment it entered the room, it pounced on the badly carved mouse and paid no attention to the one that was carved so well.

There was nothing for the rich man to do but to give the gold to the 'unskilful' sculptor. "Well, now that you have the gold, tell me how you did it?" he asked.

"It was easy. I did not carve my mouse from wood. I carved it from dried fish. That's why the cat pounced on it swiftly," the sculptor replied.

When the rich man heard it, he could not stop laughing. The cat and everyone in the room had been fooled. Finally, he decided to give each sculptor a bag of gold: one to the man who had carved so well, and the other to the man who had carved cleverly. The rich man would keep the wooden mouse and his cat could have the other.

Learning to fly a kite is like riding a bike. Once you learn how, it is hard to forget.

The traditional kite-flying season is in spring. However, winds at this time of the (46)_____ can be too strong and gusty for most paper kites. If you fly in gusty winds, you risk damaging or even losing your kite. Furthermore, if there is a thunderstorm in your area, leave your kite at (47)_____. The kite line will conduct electricity which is a fact proven by Ben Franklin's dangerous experiment.

A kite is most likely to break when flown for the first time. Check every part (48)_____ launching your kite. Watch carefully and note how the kite first reacts to the wind. Run forward so that the kite can land safely if it starts to spin. It is easier to launch a kite with some help from another (49)_____.

Try to fly in an open area away from power lines, trees, buildings, roads and airports. The golden (50)_____ of kite flying is to fly where the kite will not create a hazard to you or others. Beaches, parks and open fields are generally the best flying areas. Watch the direction of flags, trees or smoke to see if there is disturbed wind flow.

Dear Grandma

Thank you for the lovely birthday card that you sent last week. I enjoy listening to the tune every time I open the card.

Last night, there was a blackout in our neighbourhood. I was playing chess with Dad after dinner while Mum was helping Tony with his mathematics homework. Little John was watching a cartoon on television.

Suddenly all the lights went out. It was pitch dark! Tony and I looked out of the window and found there was not a single light in the surrounding blocks of flats. Dad told us not to worry as it was just a power failure. He went to the kitchen and came back with a few lit candles. He placed them on the sofa table. Just then, our neighbour came knocking on our door. He wanted to borrow some candles and matches from us. Dad passed him a few.

Mum brought out a few packs of chocolate milk and told us to sit around the coffee table. She also took out a box of cookies. As we waited for the lights to come on, we spent the time telling stories by candlelight. Although little John was scared, he sat next to us because he could not stop munching the cookies.

The lights came back on one hour later. By then we were all ready for bed. Little John refused to go to bed. He wanted to sleep with Mum and Dad. What a baby!

Please write soon, Grandma.

Lots of love from
Chris
